GIGABYTE SIM Registration Code

Gigabyte has today announced that the newly developed G1.S6 E5 Live is a liquid cooled cooler from DEX, a company who will be releasing water blocks and all the other cooling solutions you need to enhance your PC. The G1.S6 E5 Live will be available in 3 different versions, with two versions keeping their stock APU, while the third will be the one with the range of liquid cooling accessories. DEX for AMD has been around since 2008, and now has a good reputation of creating high quality liquid cooling solutions for all the latest hardware for both AMD and Intel platforms. Most of the time, these solutions run on an 86 degree Celsius core, which is quite low and should not go unnoticed. With the G1.S6 E5 Live, DEX is going one step further with 100 degree Celsius heat sinks and liquid cooling to keep everything running cool and smooth. The G1.S6 E5 Live is based on the AMD E-350 series APU with AMD Radeon HD 6550D GPU. This APU is not intended for the desktop, but it should be sufficient for some light gaming on lower configurations. The hardware used for the development of this G1.S6 E5 Live is an AMD E-350APU with the 6550D GPU. The entire setup is kept inside a white chassis, and it is finished with a 25x25cm industrial frame made of MDF with a steel finish. There are two 120mm radiator fans on top, which has a 120mm x 120mm radiator back side-mounted, which keeps everything well cooled with its ability to dissipate 100 Watts, while having a max capacity of 50 Watts of heat. The top side of the chassis contains a 120mm x 120mm GPU radiator which is placed in the back. The power of the unit comes from a 22cm long gold plated PSU, which can handle up to 300 Watts. The whole setup is cooled by a 14x10mm DEX Ultra 140 pump, which is capable of pumping up to 240 LPM (Liter Per Minute). This pump then takes the temperature and pressure levels to the radiator, which on its turn dissipates the heat through the top radiator. The DEX Ultra 140 is very powerful and should be able to handle the cooling of the CPU and GPU with no problems, while the pump does the work when it comes to the rest of the liquid cooling functions. The pump is also plug and play, and should not require
