You can fry the turkey in a large saute pan with oil, then finish it up in the oven. Keep in mind that the heat will vary greatly depending on whether the pan is the oven, says Martha Stewart. Before you roast the turkey, put the pan in the oven, set the oven thermostat at 350 degrees, and leave the oven door open a crack. Pour in your oil, and place the turkey in the pan and roast. Make sure the wings are tucked in, and close the oven door. The next step is to check the turkey halfway through the roasting process. If you see lots of fat bubbling up from the bottom of the pan, the turkey is done. If you open the door, you may have trouble closing it again. The large variety of programs that can be used to analyze sos photos perdues photo recovery results is incredible.
