As a fantasy role-playing game with a vast world, it's quite different from "Fantasy RPG" this and "fantasy RPG" that. Players won't find any fantasy in a fantasy RPG. Experience a world where the fantasy is the most reasonable thing in your world. In the Age of the Elden, monsters and humans have long coexisted. The monsters are not the enemies that have to be exterminated. Humans and monsters are different races and have been friends since the dawn of time. The race of monsters began to disappear due to the lack of food. Unlike humans, who need to eat to live, monsters' life is sustained by their own body. Their bodies don't need to eat once their hunger is satiated, which makes monsters extremely powerful. When they became overpopulated, many monsters started to move to the towns and villages in order to steal the food from humans. The monsters raided the towns. Of course, the humans were also involved in the disputes. Thus, the war between the monsters and the humans began. Humans and monsters fought so that the humans could survive and the monsters couldn't. At the same time, humans started building vast castles, cities, and towns. They tried to gain strength. They didn't want to face such war and they wanted to live as far away from the world of monsters as possible. They built walls and castles to protect themselves. They built their own home. They thought that the war would end, but they ended up living in this world where they killed the monsters to live in their own world. Now, you have the chance to join this cruel world. Welcome to the fantasy action role-playing game where the fantasy is the most reasonable thing in your world. The hero that is your ideal character will shine in the battlefield. ▷ The Flow of the Battle

On Monday, November 12, Venezuelan Attorney General Luisa Ortega announced that her office had found what it described as “obvious violations of electoral laws” during the country’s legislative elections, which took place on May 20. The allegations centered on the failure by some media outlets to follow the law regarding their financing, as well as alleged use of social networks to manipulate public opinion. Attorney General Ortega made the announcement after international and national media had examined numerous documents related to the May 20 elections. Ortega’s announcement did not specify which laws had been violated. This decision was, according to the attorney general, a “second step” necessary to implement “the pending litigation” filed against the government of Nicolás Maduro. This step follows the Venezuelan Inter-American Commission on Human Rights’ (CIDH) decision to place two articles on the Venezuelan Constitution on hold after the May 20 elections. These articles concern the presidential elections of 2018. “The Inter-American Commission on Human Rights will continue to monitor the situation in Venezuela,” the CIDH declared at the end of August. The first article requested that the Venezuelan State ensure to the population “free and general access to adequate information concerning the process of elections” and the second “effective protection of the integrity of the voting and electoral process.” The CIDH also submitted other requests to the Venezuelan state, as well as other international organizations, including a new information request with the United Nations on the events of the elections. On November 12, it became known that the CIDH had ordered Venezuela’s police and armed forces to stop detaining members of the Venezuelan National Guard who allegedly took part in the electoral violence against the opposition. The CIDH had sent a team to the Venezuelan capital to investigate the post-electoral violence and the conduct of the National Guard. Ortega noted that she received 14 letters sent by various human rights organizations criticizing irregularities in the elections. In her announcement, the attorney general referred to the allegations made in the letters, saying

Notes on Game Play: There are currently two game modes. 1. The first game mode uses a random map generator to randomly generate the next map you play on. 2. The second game mode is a tutorial game mode, in which you play the game using the map editor. When playing the tutorial mode, you should not use the map editor for making changes to the map, but only for editing items to build the map like so. -Please note that by default, the map editor is used in the game, and by doing so we will prevent any possible hacking attempts. After you select the mode that you wish to use, the map editor's interface will appear at the bottom of the game. MyPlay.ttx Zone - Stage - Shop Challenge - Boss - Battle - Continue - Map Editor 1.
