Retinoic acid receptor beta, a gene that exhibits species differences in response to retinoic acid, is expressed in the subependymal zone and the pineal gland of adult rat brain. The retinoic acid receptor beta (RAR-beta) belongs to the retinoic acid receptor family that includes nuclear receptors for retinoic acid and plays an important role in retinoic acid-dependent gene regulation. We examined the distribution of RAR-beta mRNA and protein in the adult rat brain. Although RAR-beta mRNA was detected in the fetal rat brain, its expression was restricted to particular brain regions of the adult rat brain. RAR-beta mRNA was expressed in the subependymal zone (SEZ) and the pineal gland of adult rat brain. In addition, RAR-beta mRNA was found in the choroid plexus and in the hippocampus of adult rat brain. Furthermore, retinoic acid, a ligand for retinoic acid receptors, stimulated RAR-beta gene expression in the SEZ and choroid plexus of adult rat brain. These results suggest that RAR-beta plays a role in the expression of genes in the subependymal zone and the choroid plexus of the adult rat brain. Superpower. It's how much military advantage China has over the United States in a hypothetical war between the two countries. China is a superpower. Russia is a superpower. The United States isn't a superpower. This is the standard definition of a superpower, from Wikipedia: A superpower is a country that has a high ranking in the world economic, political, and military standings. Those are the most common definitions. Other countries have a superpower ranking too. The US does not have the highest ranked superpower. The US is second to China. China's economy is much larger. China has a superpower ranking. Another measure: A super power is a country which has the most powerful military force in a particular time period.
