By using the true color images of TM and Multi-temporal ETM+ satellite images, this study firstly set up urban-rural maps of Chaoyang District and determined the urbanization degree of complex terrain, and finally simulated the urbanization degree of complex terrain based on land use classification map of Chaoyang District. The results showed that the urbanization degree of the complex terrain in Chaoyang District was relatively high. There were 2.01 km², 9.16 km², 22.54 km², 28.97 km² of urban area, and the urbanization degree of complex terrain in Chaoyang District, Daxing District, Fengtai District, Haicheng District, and Yanqing District was 5.23%, 6.31%, 1.59%, 3.06% and 0.48%, respectively. The statistical analysis of remote sensing images showed that the urbanization degree of the complex terrain in Chaoyang District was related to the extent of the urban area, the terrain shape, and the function of urbanization control. For the complex terrain in Chaoyang District, the following were the main factors which affected the urbanization degree: the urban area (NO(2)), the orographic grade (NO(3)), and the urbanization control measures (NO(4)). The average relationship between NO(2) and NO(3) was 0.395, and the average relationship between NO(3) and NO(4) was 0.507.
